DESIGN. There is much probability we think, in the assertion of the New York World that it is not the intention of the Federal flotilis to attempt the capture of the large Southern scaports at present, but that the manifest object of the deet is to effect a lodgment on an island, or some sacpoint that commands one or more important harbors with a view to future operations.

The design of the expedition, as originally to vealed before sailing from Fortress Monroe, is well lenown. It was understood to be the eccupallon of some large Southern coast city, in it avowed purpose of reopening the cotton raids and thus fulfill the promise of Lancoux to procure the shipment of large quantities of the staple to Europe, including England and France In particular. Nothing is more necessary that for the flotilla to have some place for tendepress in case of another ac sea. Pensacola, the said Hennfort are the only harbors they can be entered by some of the large class versels that form a part of it, and hence the probability of one, or even both of the latter being so formidably threatened with occupation as our last accounts from the coast. If a debackation should be made at one of these places, or elsewhere on some island close by, our imprescion, as derived from the northern press, is, that targe reinforcements will be dispatched to them before a movement is made appa any of the ad-
